Rats fed a diet containing 4 per cent protein and 1.7 per cent fat gained body weight and consumed daily about 3.5 times as much food energy as did those fed a diet containing 10 per cent protein and 0.8 per cent fat. Rations containing 8.7 per cent protein and 2.6 per cent fat kept rats at a low weight. Increasing the fat content of rations increased insulin requirement to keep weight at a fixed level. In addition, the amount of food needed for maintenance increased with increasing weight, the amount of food ingested per day remaining roughly constant. When rats were adapted to the diets for three to four weeks, and when given glucose bolus tests, those fed the low-protein-high-fat diet were insulin deficient.

Several restaurants across the city are offering a new Japanese-inspired dish called Black Rice, which combines an entire bushel of black-eyed pea rice with steamed vegetables and is topped with a sauce made from sticky rice. The specially created dishes feature a quintessential black-eyed pea flavor that's distinctly different from those found in most markets or chain restaurants. "In Japan, black rice often has an earthy taste to it," says chef Michi Sato, who runs the restaurants behind the Black Rice dishes. "We wanted to take advantage of that, so that we can give the flavor of black rice in the dishes we make." Among the dishes are the Black Rice: Chickpeas, Radish & Mustard Grilled Salmon Tacos ($12.50) and the Black Rice: Marinated Tofu with Sautéed Veget
